Why do people find comfort in certain music genres, and how does music affect our behavior?

It is well known by most that music can and likely does affect our behavior, many people wonder how and why it affects so many people in such diverse ways. Could it be because music makes us feel a certain way? Do different music genres make us think different thoughts? What kind of thoughts do they cause us to come up with? Can music cause us to act a certain way? Does music have any health benefits for humans? If so, what health benefits does it have?

become increasingly explicit-particularly with reference to sex, drugs, and violence. Music is important to teenagers' identity especially and helps them define important social and subcultural boundaries. During the 1980s and 1990s, the most rebellious forms of Metal, African American music, and electronic dance music were labeled by adults as “problematic” music and perceived as to be promoting violence, substance abuse, sex, blasphemy, and depression (ter Bogt, Keijsers & Meeus, 2013). While Metal music does have a tendency to be very aggressive, when that aggression is felt by the listeners, it is likely to be exhibited in ways that do seem to be unsafe but very safe at the same time.

Although the many claim that engaging with “unusual” media will inevitably lead to problematic behavior are wildly exaggerated, social scientific research has uncovered associations between media use, particularly music listening and music video watching, and a range of externalizing problematic behaviors, including minor misbehavior (ter Bogt, Keijsers & Meeus, 2013).

A small amount of research has investigated the role of music in the development of agg...

...ial lyrics. Also as predicted, participants' mood was negatively influenced by annoying music and antisocial lyrics. However, the no music control condition produced unexpected results in which participants' positive and negative mood scores both decreased.

There are several possible explanations as to why an individual's mood would change based on music. As previously found, music with prosocial lyrics gives an individual access to more prosocial thoughts (Greitmeyer, 2009). We believe the prevalence of prosocial thoughts would make a person more inclined to rate themselves higher on the positive affect items present in the PANAS.

The event in Littleton, Colorado, 5 years ago was a shocking wake up call to our society. Because of Eric Harris and Dylan Klebold's fanaticism with artists such as Marilyn Manson, music was labeled as the culprit for negatively influencing the youth of America. Music is a tool of expression that an artist uses to vent their frustrations and to emotionally disturbing lyrics and dark melodies. To grab the attention of teenagers, musicians often produce music videos with a vivid portrayal of the song's message. The heavy influence it has on kids today is in direct relation to the murders and shootings that are happening. The use of CD walkmans and the carelessness of parents are making it easier for children to get their hands on the "satanic music." The anger expressed by these musicians shows the youth that violence is culturally acceptable. Due to the strong

Music is something that I believe we could not live without. There is a quote by a philosopher named Friedrich Nietzsche that says “without music, life would be a mistake”. I interpret this to mean that humans would not be creative if it were not for music. There is a reason that music can take us where words cannot. When you hear so many different sounds coming together to make a perfect harmony it is obvious that no words can make you feel the same way as
